It was all about removing paper processes and using digital alternatives to be able to work better and with more efficiency.

SSAA had entered in its 31st year of legacy showcasing talent, skills and innovation. As year after year the intake has increased, there are more number of students thus more usage of papers. How much of it is being recycled is questionable. 2020 was the time where technology and innovation were going hand in hand. The workshop familiarised with various tools and tricks that they can use to present their work digitally (paperless) while being person explaining the details. Students also learnt various methods to succinctly present their work and effectively.
