SCHOOL OF LAW

SUSHANT UNIVERSITY

PARTICIPATIVE LEARNING

At Sushant University's School of Law, participative learning is at the heart of our academic philosophy, ensuring that students are not passive recipients of knowledge but active contributors to their own legal education. By adopting the Socratic Method, our faculty cultivates a classroom culture of inquiry and reflection, prompting students to question assumptions, articulate legal arguments, and engage in rigorous intellectual discourse. Moot Courts and Mock Trials are integral components of our pedagogy, offering hands-on experience in litigation, case preparation, and courtroom procedures, all under the guidance of seasoned legal professionals. Our Legal Aid Clinics provide invaluable exposure to real-world legal challenges, where students work with clients from marginalized communities, draft petitions, and even participate in court proceedings, thereby gaining practical skills and fostering a strong sense of social responsibility.

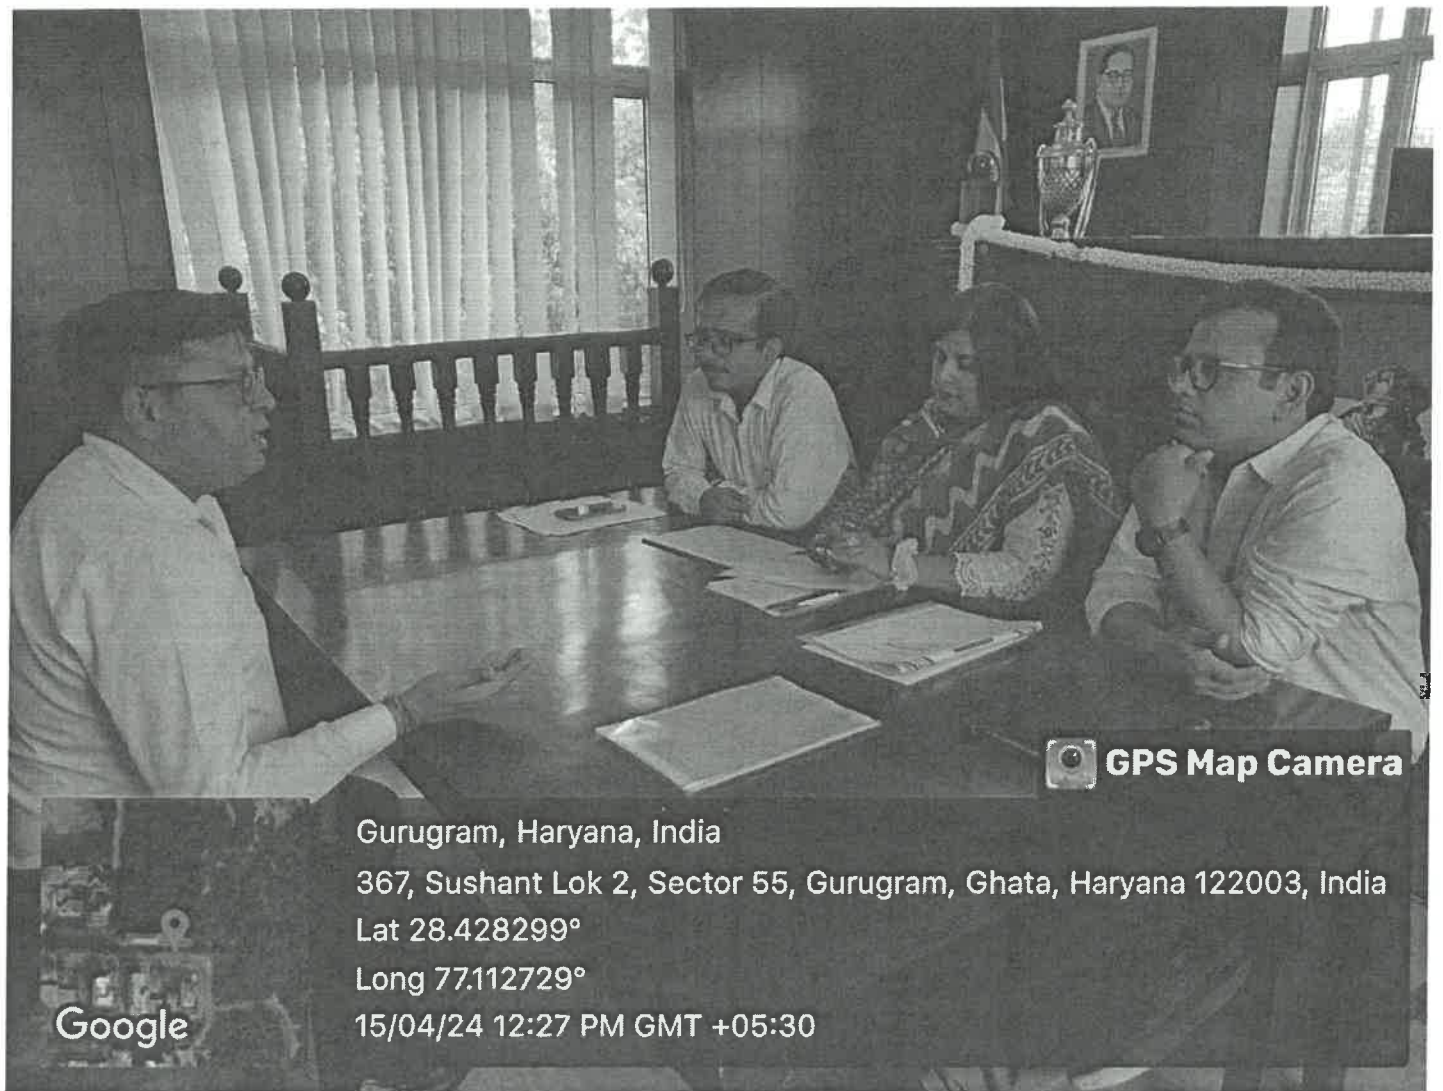

Additionally, structured debates and expert-led panel discussions on current legal controversies sharpen students' public speaking and critical thinking abilities while broadening their perspectives on evolving jurisprudence. Through Case Method analysis, students delve deep into judicial decisions, dissecting legal reasoning and exploring the implications of precedent, fostering a nuanced understanding of legal doctrine. Interactive role plays and simulations, such as mock legislative sessions and negotiation exercises, place students in complex, real-life scenarios, helping them build empathy, ethical judgment, and professional confidence.

Collaborative group projects further strengthen interpersonal skills, teamwork, and research capabilities, often culminating in comprehensive presentations or draft legislation. Peer teaching initiatives and structured feedback sessions enable students to critique constructively and learn from one another, reinforcing academic rigor and communication skills. To complement these activities, our use of cutting-edge legal technology—including online research platforms, e-learning modules, and virtual moot courts—prepares students for the demands of contemporary legal practice. Through this holistic and participative approach, Sushant University's School of Law aims to produce not only competent legal professionals but also thoughtful, socially conscious leaders in the field of law.
